Eighty years ago, a military coup d'état in Spain led to a civil war, just prior to the Second World War. It ended with rebel victory and the establishment of a dictatorship that lasted four decades. Forty years after the death of General Franco and the demise of the authoritarian regime that emerged from the war, this conference stems from the clear need to lay the groundwork for re-conceptualising the memory and the history of the coup d'état, the Civil War and the dictatorship. We hope to assess and analyse a new codification of events that has been developing for some time, and confront it with inherited narratives that show signs of exhaustion but persist nonetheless.

In this gathering, historiography and literary studies – two spheres of knowledge concerned with Memory – will engage in dialogue, creating a unique occasion for presenting and discussing diverse perspectives, interpretations and ethical dimensions of what Spanish society today treats as an uncomfortable past. We will also address the need for a new narrative of this past and the materials available for constructing it.

The idea is to identify the inherited narrative, which was based on Transition ideas of reconciliation but constructed on the reasoning of the combatants, the fragmented memories of victims and executioners, the propaganda of the winners and the bitterness of the losers. The dominant social narrative should be contrasted, deconstructed and confronted with other, subaltern memories in light of new research, perspectives and emphases fed by a fresh current of historic and historiographic knowledge, along with fresh paradigms in literary and cultural studies. Eighty years after the coup d'état, and 40 years into democracy, external perspectives and comparison can assist the process and we can address the ethical dimension of knowledge of the past.
